A TEDIOUS STORY (from An Old Man s Journal) There lives in Hussia an emeritus professor, Nicolai Stiepanovich . - . privy councillor and knight. He has so many Russian and foreign Orders that when he puts them on the students call him the holy picture. His acquaintance is most distinguished. Not a single famous scholar lived or died during the last twenty-five or thirty yeas but he was intimately acquainted with him. Now he has no one to be friendly with, but speaking of the past the long list of his eminent friends would end with such names as Pirogov, Kavelin, and the poet Nekrasov, who bestowed upon him their warmest and most sincere friendship. He is a member of all the Russian and of three foreign universities, et cetera, et cetera. All this, and a great deal besides, forms what is...
