Environmental Protection Agency, 2003 OCLC Number: (OCoLC)77481529 Subject: Choice of transportation. Excerpt: . . . Travel and Environmental Implications of School Siting by main activity, one of which is student. The other classifies trips by main purpose, one of which is school trip. If all personal and travel data were reported correctly, identifying school trips would be a simple matter of selecting trips by students to or from school. Several factors complicated the identification of school trips: (1) Households did not always report trips by children. While the travel diary instructions called on participating households to report all trips, a surprising number simply disregarded childrens trips. We added phantom trips to the database where adult members of households made trips to or from school and three other conditions were met: the household had members under 16 years; the adult was accompanied on the trip by other people, and the number traveling together dropped on the next leg of the adults trip, implying a drop off at school (or increased following the school trip, implying a pickup). (2) Respondents did not always identify their main activity. If someone in the first two age categories (under 16 years) made a trip to or from school, he or she was assumed to be a student making a school trip whether student status was properly reported or not. (3) Students making school trips were not always in the K-12 age range, not surprising for a university town. Trips were dropped from the database if travelers began or ended their trips in a traffic analysis zone (TAZ) belonging to an institution...
