Excerpt: .of these organizations the educational advance is astonishing. Where, three years since, there was almost absolute ignorance of the processes of marketing, there is now a general intelligence which renders the manipulations and deceptions which were formerly common utterly impossible. The competition of the cooperative societies has led to such an improvement in the service rendered by commission houses as alone to repay an hundredfold the cost of the cooperative effort, and in these and other indirect ways the benefits of cooperation are felt and acknowledged by all. There is danger, however, that growers, finding no present saving in the cost of marketing, will not persist in cooperation until the managers of societies have learned the business so well that they make the small saving in expense which is certainly possible by cooperation. My duties as manager of the State Exchange have brought me...
