WHO CARES?

Createspace, United States, 2013. Paperback. Book Condition: New. 216 x 216 mm. Language: English . Brand New Book  Print on Demand .I was in tears. I was weeping because I had just spent some time talking to a mom who had no place to stay and no means by which she could provide suitable, safe housing for her children. Her children are about the same age as my kids and the thought of my kids (or any other kid) sleeping in a car, an abandoned train car, or in an abandoned building breaks my heart. To make matters worse, this woman wasn't an addict. She wasn't lazy. She has job--two jobs, in fact. Between the jobs, she doesn't make enough to put food on the table and pay for rent and utilities. Mid-sobfest, Maddie awoke from her nap. She stumbled into my office, blanket in hand and thumb in her mouth. I wiped the tears from my eyes, sniffed with gusto, and attempted to hide my sadness from my daughter. However, Maddie is rather perceptive and it didn't take her long to figure out that daddy was sad. So we sat at my desk and talked about why daddy was sad. With childlike faith, Maddie suggested we pray for the mom and her children and, after we concluded with an amen, she suggested we do something. Convicting words, yet a frustrating suggestion, given our scant resources. In that moment--as I held Maddie, considered what she said and made excuses for why we couldn't do something to solve this enormous problem that is greater than the resources that we have--two things came to mind: 1) God cares. It's something we talk about constantly with our kids. It's a message that we've conveyed...
