Excerpt: . on his annual visit to the island, was surprised to get an order from the Captain for four dozen brass andirons, which cost at wholesale about three dollars and a half each. This order was duplicated the following year. Good work, Cap n, said the salesman. How do you do it? And the Captain told him. The andirons were put in the damp cellar of the shop during the winter to age. They were ripe when the summer influx of antique hunters arrived. One at a time they were exposed to view in the shop, covered with verdigris, and, whenever the door opened and one of the antiquarian species entered, the Cap tain got busy with a rag, polishing the andiron, being careful, however, not to rub too hard. It worked like a charm. According to the wily Captain, here is what usually...

The publication is easy in read better to understand. It is writter in basic words and phrases rather than hard to understand. You wont truly feel monotony at anytime of your respective time (that's what catalogues are for about if you question me).
