A total re-organization began on 1 January 1791 with the abolition of the old regimental titles, and over the next two years an increasing number of conscript and volunteer battalions were formed. Their quality varied from the proficiency of the early National Guard regiments to the untrained and ill-equipped rabble of the levée en masse. To combine the discipline and steadiness of the regular army with the revolutionary fervor of the new army, the Amalgam was decreed on 21 February; by this measure each regular battalion became the nucleus of a...
