Iconcept Press, United States, 2014. Paperback. Condition: New. Language: English . Brand New Book  Print on Demand . Cancer is a broad group of diseases involving unregulated cell growth, in which cells divide and grow uncontrollably, forming malignant tumors, and invade nearby parts of the body. Cancer may also spread to different parts of the body through the lymphatic system or the bloodstream. Cancer -- Cares, Treatments and Preventions discusses some recent advances in cancer research. Chapter 1 discusses the epidemiology of smoking and tobacco prevention efforts globally with emphasis on anti-tobacco education at the Elementary School level. Chapter 2 considers both the protection and inclusion of pregnant women in clinical trials. Guidance and an algorithm for determining which is appropriate for studies is included. Chapter 3 describes a method called Multiple reaction monitoring (MRM), which is a targeted MS-based technology that provides the specificity, throughput, and multiplexing capabilities required for candidate biomarker quantitation in patient samples. Chapter 4 discusses monoclonal antibodies (mAbs). mAbs and their derivatives, continue to be the focus of the biopharmaceutical industry for many diagnostic and therapeutic applications. In spite of vast improvements in our capability to deal with mAbs, they still pose many...
