Davis, of Minnesota, in the Senate of the United States, Wednesday and Thursday, January 10 and 11, 1894 The Senate having under consideration the resolution submitted by Mr Frye January 3,1894, proposing to declare as the opinion of the Senate that, pending the Investigation by the Committee on Foreign Relations, there should be no Interference on the part of the Government of the United States with affairs In Hawaii - Mr. Davis said: Mr. President: On the 4th day of March, 1893, there was no question pending between this Government and the Government of Hawaii except the consideration of the treaty of annexation. All preceding questions, whatever they were, had been gathered up into the recognition of that Government, and had been settled in the most solemn form by the conclusion of a convention which had been submitted to the Senate. The Provisional Government of Hawaii had also been recognized by the nations of the civilized world, and from no quarter of the horizon was there any portent whatever of trouble to come. Immediately upon the accession of the present Administration recommendations were made and action was taken which, in the course of their performance and in their consequences, have largely undone, and threaten entirely to undo, the composed condition of affairs which up to that time had existed. Our relations to those islands are now such as to excite the gravest apprehension, and seem to be fraught with consequences which, as they evolve from day to day, no foresight can adequately predict. The widest divergence of opinion exists, the matter is thrown into the sea of...
